

Abstract

The invention relates to an injection moulded product comprising an attached body which has been attached by an intermediate layer. The body has been attached to the injection moulded product by an intermediate layer attached to the body prior to the injection moulding. The invention also relates to a method for the manufacture of an injection moulded product comprising a body which has been attached by an intermediate layer.